

Live-in care success is all about matching carers' personalities and skills to the person whom they are going to support.

Access Care is a respected Live-in Carer recruitment agency based just outside Stockbridge. The company introduces expertly qualified private carers to households across the country for people living with varied medical conditions. Carers also provide support to the frail elderly, those in need of end-of-life care and to people simply seeking a companion and a little help with their daily chores.

The agency interviews all their live-in carers face-to-face when they register to find out about them - not just their level of care experience and training, but also their interests and type of person.

Careful due diligence and the close nature of the team ensures that Access Care will confidently select and present a suitable shortlist of well-matched individuals for a client and family's final selection.

Tiggy Bradshaw, managing

Hand-picked Live-in Carers

director, said: "We are in effect matchmakers and love this element of our job. When clients and their families tell us we've literally taken a weight off their shoulders because they know their relative is safe and cared for, it's great, because that is what we do and it ensures peace of mind."

Nicky Pearson, an Access Care

client, added: "Jacqueline came along as I was at the end of my tether. She was calm and very patient with my father when he needed it most. She got him doing his exercises and has given him the confidence to move around on his Zimmer frame."
